Disabled Access Within the Public Right-of-Way

Presented by: Daniel F. Kaiser

Tuesday, May 25, 2010
Wednesday, May 26, 2010

Registration: 8:00am

Seminar: 8:30am to 4:30pm

Cost: $150

(Includes Break Refreshments & Lunch)

SEMINAR:

This same full day course offered on two consecutive days will look into the various laws and regulations that drive the need for accessible features within the public right-of-way.

This course is applicable to Architects, Engineers, Contractors, Plans Examiners, and Inspectors that design, build, or inspect; public works projects, grading, walks and sidewalks, stairways, curb ramps and crosswalks, public transportation facilities, jurisdictionally owned facilities, recreational facilities and parks.

Local jurisdictions are required under State and Federal laws to provide equal access to all, regardless of ability. Many of the laws and regulations pertaining to the built environment are outside the purview of the local building department. This course will address those requirements.

CREDITS:

Upon course completion a certificate of continuing education will be provided.

The course is presented by an AIA approved educational provider and complies with the SB 1608 continuing education requirements for California license renewal for architects and continuing education requirements for Jurisdictional Inspectors.

SPEAKER:

Dan Kaiser, a retired Building Official, is currently the owner of a private consulting firm, Access Services, Plus, specializing in Disabled Access compliance and Training and Education. Over his career in public service he has served as a Department Director, Chief Building Official, Supervising Building Inspector, Combination Building Inspector, and Codes Enforcement Officer for a number of jurisdictions throughout Southern California. Even in retirement, Dan is currently serving a Commissioner on the California Building Officials Training Institute (C.T.I.), responsible for the statewide training needs in the state of California. Dan is a recognized instructor for ICC, CALBO, AIA, CACEO, OES, and has taught at the college level in California. Dan also serves as the Chair of the California Building Officials Emergency Preparedness and Response Committee. Dan currently holds 24 various certifications from a variety of organizations such as ICC, IAPMO, IFCI, NFPA, ACIA, AIA and the State of California. Dan teaches a myriad of courses including technical and non-technical inspection technology related courses; disabled access, universal design, disaster response, and emergency operations center operations protocol, building department administration, property maintenance, building, plumbing, mechanical and electrical codes.
